One day, Honi saw a man planting a carob tree.

"How long will it take for that sapling to grow and bear fruit?" Honi inquired.

"Seventy years," the man replied.

"How do you know you will live another seventy years?" Honi asked.

"I don't," replied the man, "but just as my grandparents planted for me, I am planting for generations to come."

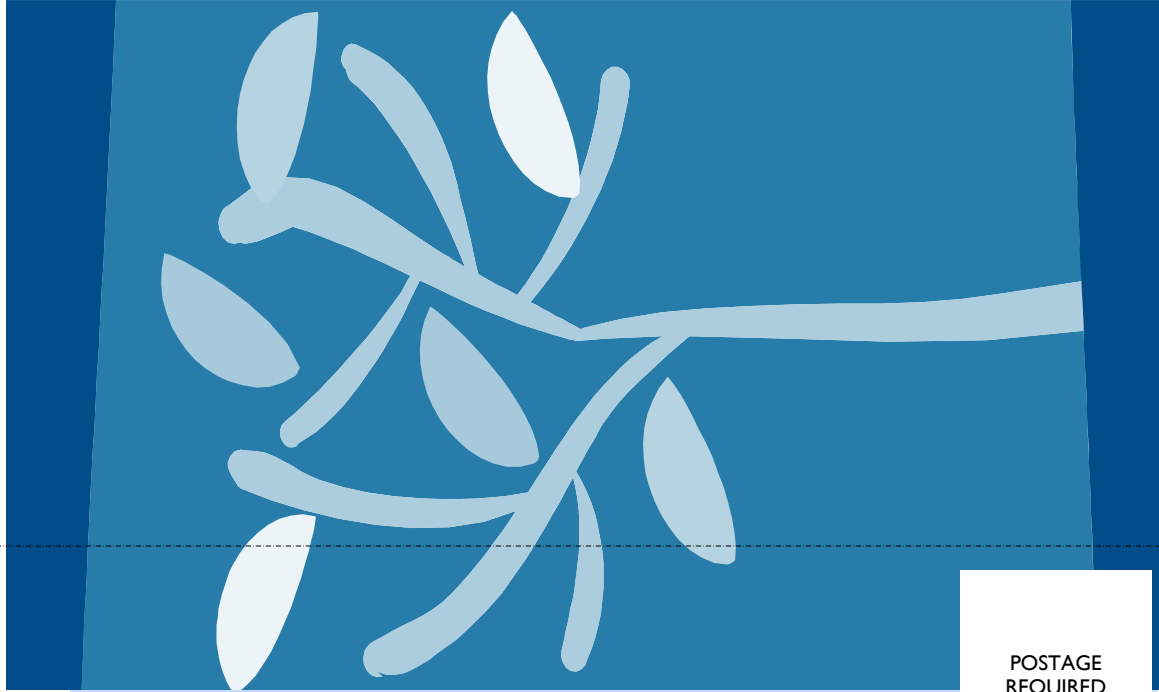

"Well fine," said Honi. As he felt tired, Honi lay down on the dusty ground and fell asleep. When he woke up, he found himself in a lush field of grass near a towering carob tree. He realized he'd slept for seventy years and the little sapling had matured to provide shade, the delights of its fruit, and more seeds for the future.

He spent the rest of his life planting carob trees throughout the Land of Israel for future generations.

Talmud teaches that each of us must personally act to ensure Jewish continuity. The synagogue is our stronghold for Jewish study, observance, communal activities, social justice, and our connection to Klal Yisrael, Jews around the world and through the ages.
